

The single most important thing we can do for meaningful discussions is to give them the time they require.

—Kevin S. Krahenbuhl, p. 28

Dynamic Discussions

A true culture of collaboration feels warm and expansive, not cold and frantic.

—Alexis Wiggins, p. 34

What if the way you talk with students is actually emphasizing compliance over engagement?

—Mike Anderson, p. 22

We need robust talk structures that allow more students to join in the conversation confidently, especially English learners, introverted students, disengaged students, and historically marginalized students.

—Zaretta Hammond, p. 45