

Educational Leadership

IN FEBRUARY

Workshops for Teachers: When we asked several hundred readers of EDUCATIONAL LEADERSHIP to suggest topics for this year's Journal, one of the most frequently mentioned subjects was "Workshops for Teachers."

In February our authors bring you suggestions for organizing and conducting your own workshop, with specific descriptions of various types of workshops and work conferences. They tell you how they planned and the purpose behind their work; they share their good ideas and their bad, letting you profit by their mistakes.

A workshop under state department leadership in Washington is described by Watt A. Long and Vernon E. Anderson. M. E. Yount writes of his experience with workshops for teachers in Alamance County, North Carolina.

A work conference at Higgins Lake in Michigan is discussed by Roland C. Faunce. R. Lee Thomas and Mary Hall describe how a rural school can be a laboratory for a workshop group.

Other contributors are Earl C. Kelley, Frances Mayfarth, L. D. Haskew, Gerald Y. Smith, Rachel S. Sutton, Cornelius V. Troup, and Mildred English.
