Combining: EDUCATIONAL METHOD CURRICULUM JOURNAL

EXPERIMENTING FOR BETTER CURRICULUMS • Consider Needs
• Six Schools Take Stock • Growth Through In-Service Action • Events in Cooperation • Harvard Looks at Education • Community Study

Journal of The Department of Supervision and Curriculum Development, N. E. A.
Educational Leadership

IN JANUARY

Changing Concepts of Supervision: What was said in last January's and February's Educational Leadership about supervision started a train of thought which readers have expressed a desire to see continued and expanded. Such is the purpose of next month's issue.

For a general picture of supervisory trends and their significance for education there is an article called "Looking at Supervision."

The broadening concept of supervision includes working in the community to strengthen the ties between the school and other groups. Two articles develop this theme, drawing practical illustrations from real experiences.

There are discussions of the place of the principal in supervision, the special problems of supervision in secondary education, and the use of teacher leadership in the supervisory process. Still another article deals with the supervision of student teachers.

IN THIS ISSUE

Experimenting for Better Curriculums

The Story Is Encouraging .................................................. 98
Consider the Needs .......................................................... 99
Groundwork for Improved Curriculums .................................. 104
DSCD to Hold National Meeting in 1946 .............................. 107
Harvard Looks at Education ............................................... 109
Curriculum for Community Study ........................................ 113
Six Schools Take Stock ..................................................... 117
Events in Cooperation ...................................................... 120
Experience Curriculum for Teaching .................................. 123
Growth Through In-Service Action ..................................... 126

Departments

The Listening Post .......................................................... 129
Front Lines in Education .................................................. 130
The Importance of People ............................................... 133
The New—in Review ....................................................... 136
Tools for Learning ......................................................... 139