VOLUME V NUMBER 1

IN NOVEMBER

Our Schools—An American Responsibility: This crucial topic sets the stage for the November issue. Parents, laymen, leaders in the American scene, school people, and graduates of our schools tell us how we may work together for the kind of education our children and youth of today need.

An informal discussion of the way in which we may more effectively plan together; parents' suggestions concerning their responsibility to the schools, as well as the kind of schools they want; a look at the national picture; treatment of such issues as the unique function of the American public school and better ways of planning good public relations programs; and descriptions of ways schools are experimenting with parent education programs, community surveys, and state-wide efforts are featured.

Contributors to this issue include parents from all parts of the country, and members of the faculty as well as school patrons from Glencoe, Ill. Other contributors are Ellis Arnall, Alice Shallenberger, V. T. Thayer, Alexander Frazier, Maurice Seay, Geoffrey Graham, and Ralph Eckert.
