VOLUME VI NUMBER 3

IN JANUARY

The Experience Curriculum in Action—What do we really mean by the activity program? January's magazine gives a variety of experiences in elementary, secondary, and college programs.

Illustrations of the kinds of experiences that do it: a high school group evaluates; another uses problem-solving methods.

Young children help in city planning; they understand communication; and are taught to think.

The balance of real and vicarious experiences is the emphasis in one article. Another stresses that in planning, the functional aspect of learning must be extremely important.

A young teacher refers to her diary for the activities in her training which proved of most value when she put them into practice.
