COLLABORATION FOR CHANGE

Benjamin Bloom on Automaticity

The cover painting, "Point of Tranquility" is by Morris Louis. A major painter of the Washington Color School during the early 1960s, Louis said of his art, "Paintings should produce a delicious pain in the eye, make the viewer gasp, knock him down . . ." So too, a melding of purpose, people and ideas—often brilliant—characterize the collaborative process, sometimes not without a little pain. "Point of Tranquility" is in the collection of the Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden, Smithsonian Institution, a gift of Joseph Hirshhorn. Photograph by John Tennant. Cover design by Al Way.
