

ASCD in Action

ASCD Networks Connect Colleagues; New Curriculum Service Available

One of ASCD's fastest growing projects is the Networks Program. The Networks Program helps educators around the world exchange ideas and establish collegial relationships.

Inaugurated seven years ago with five networks, the program now boasts 37 different networks with more than 10,000 participants. Networks are initiated by members and function independently of ASCD International. Members govern their network under the guidance of a network facilitator. Some networks are small, while others have more than 1,000 members.

The organization, activities, and purpose of each network are unique. Many networks publish newsletters and resource directories. Several make use of telecommunications as the primary means of information exchange.

Network meetings will be held on Saturday and Sunday morning during the New Orleans Annual Conference this year. Choose the networks most relevant to your interests. Become an active participant in the dynamic and effective Networks Program!

For more information on the Networks Program, contact Agnes R. Crawford, 1250 N. Pitt St., Alexandria, VA 22314-1403 or call (703) 549-9110, ext. 506.

Reach for the Curriculum Handbook

Educators interested in researching model programs, locating the latest materials on a variety of curriculum topics, scanning research summaries on topics like curriculum integration, heterogeneous grouping, and student achievement will find a new ASCD multimedia reference service useful.

Subscribers to the ASCD Curriculum Handbook receive a looseleaf handbook, reference diskettes including search-and-retrieve software, a quarterly newsletter, and a year's subscription to online electronic mail.

The ASCD Curriculum Handbook stays current year after year through an annual subscription service. Additional references on new topics and updates on programs, lessons plans, and strategies will continue to be available both in print and through electronic media. The first-year subscription price is $375.
